Everyone Welcome

Brought to Light: More Stories of Forgotten Women, a collection of short stories edited by Bernadette Rule, features stories that each bring to life a woman who was influential within her own sphere but somehow has been too long relegated to the back pages of history. Personalities revealed in these stories include Michaelangelo's mother Francesca, Canada's first black female slave Sophia Pooley, mathematician Nora Sidgewick, Tecumseh's mother Methoataske, and civil rights activist Viola Irene Desmond. Although these are works of fiction, the details of time and place are all authentic and based on research. Many of the 18 contributors, including a number of local-area authors, will be participating in this event. The book will be available for sale, and the contributors would be delighted to sign your copy.
